Established in 2012, Droit & Croissance / Rules for Growth ("D & C") is an independent think tank and research laboratory aiming to foster growth in France by improving the efficiency of its laws affecting its economic environment.

D & C was set up by young legal practitioners and researchers who have learned from law and economics theory that the law can be an engine for growth and from their practice that the French separation of law and economics severely affects the quality of its norms and economic prosperity.

D & C promotes Law & Economics theory in France and beyond, by providing a forum for researchers and encouraging a multidisciplinary approach to study the economic impact of legal norms. D & C regularly publishes constructive criticism and actionable propositions for effective reforms of French law in scholarly, professional as well as general interest publications.

D & C is now a recognised conceptual advocate of major reforms in various areas of French law including bankruptcy law, company law, competition law, labor law and taxation.
